A WAR-TIME SUBSTITUTE. Umson leaned back in his chair at the dinner table, held a cookie between the thumb and first finger of his right hand, and eyed it closely.

Mrs. Umson looked but did not smile. "Well," she said, "I suppose you are going to poke fun at my cooking again."

"Far from it," her husband answered. "Then what in the world are you doing with that cookie?"

"I was testing its resiliency."

"Its what?"

"And also taking some note of its compactness and strength."

"Isn't that making fun of it?"

"My dear, you may have unwittingly made a great discovery."

"How's that?"

"This thing may not be much of a success as a cake, but it might make a wonderful substitute for a rubber heel."

—Youngstown Telegram.

HE COULDN'T SPELL IT. In the spelling list for a class in a certain Indianapolis school were the words singing and singing. The class was asked to write sentences using these words to show that they knew the correct meaning of each. One little fellow, Robert, wrote:

"The Italians are a singing nation."

"The Allies will soon be singing the beard of the Kaiser."

With sideward glances he watched his teacher mark his paper and timidly asked:

"Is it all right?"

"Yes, she said, but the Kaiser has no beard; he has a mustache."

"I know, I know, but I wanted 100 on my paper, and I couldn't spell mustache."—Indianapolis News.
